Those delegates who wish to stop over in Bangkok can take domestic flights to Chiang Mai from either Suvarnabhumi or Don Muang airports. There are a number of daily flights to Chiang Mai from both airports. Chiang Mai International Airport provides services for both domestic and international flights.

Those who have checked flights through to Chiang Mai, when the plane lands at Suvarnabhumi airport, should: walk through to the transfer area; get the onward boarding pass (if not received already) at the TG International transfer area; proceed to the immigration counters (at the transfer area) to clear immigration; and, to then walk to the domestic counters behind the immigration area. Your luggage will be available for collection at the international section of the Chiang Mai airport.

For those delegates who do not have tickets checked through to Chiang Mai: at Suvarnabhumi airport you will be required to clear immigration and to collect your luggage. After obtaining your bags walk out of the baggage claim area to the TG domestic check-in counters which are located on the 4th floor of the building.

Entry into Thailand

Delegates will need to check their requirement for a Thailand visa. The requirement for visas is based on the nationality of the passport and UN staff intending to travel on the UN Laissez Passer may still require a visa on the basis of their nationality. Delegates living in a country that does not have a Thai Consular service should send a copy of their completed PCB registration to the following email address:

paworn@health2.moph.go.th

The Thai authorities will then issue a letter enabling delegates without visas to board their flights to Thailand where a visa may be obtained on arrival. The cost of such visas is Baht 2,000 for single entry and Baht 5,000 for multiple entry. Travelers requiring a visa must have a valid passport with at least six months before the expiration date.
