Key Issues

- Sustainability issues – PPPs need to strengthen not replace public sector (but also alternative health system)
- Provides short term stability, but longer term capacity development required
- Private sector involvement increases efficiency and brings in new technologies
- Programmes can have a knock-on effect on private sector
- Private sector operates and has systems that work across national borders
- SMEs and informal sector not have resources – need PPPs
- Use donor funding to subsidise – ensure poorest benefit
- Demand driven fits private sector approach – meet needs of ‘clients’
Challenges

- Ensuring sustainability in private sector driven PPPs
- Donor requirements and bureaucracy and short term funding
- Challenges of ‘ownership’, decision-making and accountability
- Perception of private sector as an endless source of money
- Scale up possibilities – but private sector not always know who to speak to, where to get support, and who makes the decisions within donors, UN and GF (communication)
- Challenge of working with illegal populations limits ability for PPPs to include them (but also provide opportunities)
- Sex workers as workers with rights – but not recognized
- Communities are unable to directly engage private sector
Conclusions and Recommendations

- UNAIDS to compile best practices and lessons learned from PPPs and the applicability in developing countries – clarifying roles of both public and private sector.
- UNAIDS to increase its role in facilitating and providing TS for stakeholder consultations for PPPs
- UNAIDS to encourage and support greater dialogue between the private sector and civil society, including PLHIV
- UNAIDS to support the use of existing partnerships rather than creating new structures
- Global Fund needs to continue supporting co-financing of PPPs to ensure longer-term funding, sustainability, and scale up
